Recruitment company's work/life policies praised by DEEWR

Recruitment company Nine2Three, which specialises in part-time roles and mature-age candidates, has been commended by the Department of Education, Employment and Workplace Relations for its strong focus on work/life balance.

DEEWR, which is promoting its inaugural National Work/Life Balance Awards, to be announced in February next year, cited Nine2Three as an example of a flexible employer.

It said Nine2Three had implemented a range of flexible work policies since it was launched in 2003, including flexible hours, job-sharing, part-time and remote work, a child-friendly workplace and internal and external training.

DEEWR said Nine2Three had experienced zero attrition in the past two years, despite being in an industry "that has traditionally high staff turnover rates".
